1. C
2. B
3. B
4. B
5. A (This is his best evidence, but it doesn't really prove he was in New Orleans, does it? And if he's never been there in his life, B is a pretty good answer as well. Class debate, anyone?)
6. Mark – nasal navigator
Funky – When it comes to loans, he's a keeper.
Sarah – high-maintenance girlfriend (Like DUH! She's the only girl in the list.)
Chan – can't believe his eyes
Larry – a mystery wrapped in an enigma
7. D
8. Answers will vary. My choice was "nasal fiction." Let's see... Gogol's The Nose qualifies. I'm not sure what else fits so it might be a rather unique niche.
9. This one should be fun. The word unique is key. Think NYC. There's the Statue of Liberty and the Chrysler Building. No one else has them. Likewise with Paris and its Eiffel Tower and Notre Dame. This is a good opportunity to throw in some Social Studies.
10. I've had kids (and adults) argue over this one, as well as people who couldn't figure it out at all.
